Phases and phrases fill high school years

At a time when people strive to be different from each other, it becomes only clearer that people are much alike. This likeness is especially true in high school. During high school, teenagers undergo nearly identical physical and mental changes. And because of these resemblances, students find themselves speaking and thinking along the same lines. In short, we all go through the same phases, and express them with the same phrases.

For four years, we all confront similar problems, feel similar joys, suffer similar disappointments. Most teenagers experience love and all its pleasure and pain for the first time in high school. Also, students are forced to make tough decisions about family, friends, school, career, and themselves. As a result, most of us languish through a period of confusion and self-doubt, wondering if we made the right choices. It is not an easy four years.

To express these emotions, we find ourselves using the same phrases and idioms: “She’s a babe!” or “I’m gonna’ score on those potato chips,” or sometimes during bad times “I’m all bummed out.” The most important thing to remember is that everyone else is experiencing the same feelings, and to turn to your friends for help; they know what you’re going through. A poet once said, “No man is an island”—he is right. We are all bridged together by our fears, our fantasies, and our flaws.
With the old shop classrooms torn out, Mr. Burns’ drafting classes were forced to adapt to the cramped confines of the lower hall.

A maze of scaffolding supports the rafters of the new shop as the building addition begins to take form.

To the delight of students and faculty alike, new parking lots were constructed to supply ample parking for B.S.H.S.
Construction alters school

With the passing of a $6.5 million bond issue, construction of a new shop addition and other improvements began last fall. In addition to the changes in the appearance of the building, the construction forced students and teachers to adjust.

When the teachers' parking lot was ripped up, the faculty was forced to park in the students' lot, overloading the parking facilities. Also, the entire industrial arts department was pushed out of its rooms and into halls, the cafeteria, the auditorium, and anywhere possible. But knowing it was all for the school's betterment, everyone adjusted perfectly.

When winter set upon B.S.H.S., the work crews set upon building inside creating a new shop out of metal and mortar.
Mrs. Chris Wood—
bringing English to life

The room appears quite normal. Inside this classroom at the end of the English hall are desks, chalkboards, books, all the furnishings of any other room in the building. There is, however, one major difference—the room is Mrs. Chris Wood’s.

Once in this room, a student will find himself amused, hassled, intrigued, and in the end, literate. Because she breathes life into the room and the English language, Mrs. Wood is the dedicatee for the 1981-82 Totem Pole.

To benefit her students, she has directed plays, sponsored students in speech contests, taught fencing, and generally given her time and energy to any effort which will advance students.

Witty, intelligent, energetic, and demanding, she conducts her classes with dynamics that keep her students interested. From Beowulf to Murder on the Orient Express, Mrs. Wood’s knowledge of literature is transformed to students in unforgettable ways.

In short, Mrs. Wood is a major force behind the advancement of students. She leaves no stone unturned as she forces her students “to strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield.”
Mrs. Wood's emotions and expressions run the full gambit from a cheerful smile (at left) to an intense stare (below).

ORGANIZATIONS

In order to find others with similar interests, students join clubs. No matter what the hobby, a student can find an organization to meet his needs.

For those who want to discover other cultures, the Spanish, French, and Junior Classical League organizations bring the world to B.S.H.S. Students wishing to support the school's sports teams become cheerleaders, Bonnerettes, and join Spirit Club.

To help people in the school and the community, some become members of Kayettes, P.E.E.R. and F.H.A. Students with an interest in politics and student government run for Student Council.

If music and performing are the student's hobby, he or she can play in the band, sing in one of the vocal music organizations, or enlist as a thespian.

As diversified as these clubs are, they still accomplish the same task; bringing students together. Knowing that he is not alone in his interests, a student will grow in confidence and find other vocations. In short, organizations are just another way in which students realize that they are very much like the other students around them.
Students watch rapidly changing world

In addition to the changes and complexities of their own lives, students also saw the dramatic changes that took place in the world around them.

Growing concern over the economy, jobs, nuclear war, cancer, and other problems kept people watching anxiously.

Students watched with pride as the space shuttle Columbia blasted off and returned home. They also stood in horror over the murder of John Lennon and the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II and President Reagan.

Abroad, students witnessed through television fighting in the Middle East, in the Falkland Islands, and El Salvador. Also, the Royal Wedding held students’ attention.

Locally, construction of the new junior high, the Renaissance Festival, and a endless string of escaped prisoners kept people on their toes.

All in all, the 1981-82 school year saw a variety of changes take place both around the corner and around the globe.
Governor John Carlin paid a visit to B.S.H.S. to speak to students about the last legislative session and answer student's questions. His visit was arranged by Miss Jill Mullins, who is very active in politics herself.

With the opening of I-435, Johnson County and its shopping and recreation facilities was suddenly just a short drive for students on a weekend night.
Under the leadership of president Jeff Shuster, the 1981-82 Student Council added new jobs and responsibilities to its already busy schedule.

To increase social activity at the school, STUCO held several free dances in the Commons with council members as disk jockeys. The organization also created a junior class honor society to recognize outstanding juniors and established a second Student Council Scholarship.

In addition, STUCO carried out its regular duties: directing the Homecoming activities, making "survival kits" for freshmen, and running concession stands to raise money for projects.

With Shuster and vice-president Regina Stillman at the helm, STUCO increased its ability to benefit both the students and faculty.
The mixers, with their taped music, brought out the students and the disc jocks for an evening of fun. Shuster selected the tapes, Tom Wier and Bill Rehm were dj's and if you didn't dance, you could eat popcorn and listen.

A true Kayette being of service

To be a Kayette you must do the following: be a good friend, perform your duties, and love your neighbor. Caring about others is the big emphasis. So, the Kayettes support an orphan, collect food for the needy at Christmas, have a secret Valentine and provide refreshments for teachers at enrollment. All of this is financed by their Mr. Irresistible contest and their soap sales. The members are busy but they enjoy every minute of it.
Kevin Power, Mr. Irresistible, enjoys the attention of Debbie Robinette, Michelle Waterman, Jackie Owens, and Jolinda Lee. At right, the contest rules.

Rock and roll—the music of our age

We follow each other to the concerts and rock with the beat. The music, the lights, the action lead us into a new space and time. We wear our shirts to school to advertise our approval of the concert the night before. We love to rock.
P.E.E.R. teaches students to cope with life

P.E.E.R., which is an abbreviation for Positive Educational Experiences Through Relationships, offers students an ear that will listen to those problems which sometimes have to be expressed to someone. A forum for expression, a helping hand, a friendly smile, a little reassurance, a lot of caring—that's P.E.E.R.

Only in its second year at Bonner, P.E.E.R. has grown in enthusiasm as well as in numbers.
French Club enjoyed a variety of activities this year. They visited a French restaurant in Kansas City for dinner. They learned French Christmas carols and French Christmas customs and celebrated Christmas by using them. They had a tasting party and a cooking party where they tasted typically French foods and they tried cooking French style. There's only one thing left to do—go to Paris!

Spanish Club keeps busy spreading Spanish culture

Promoting the Spanish language and culture, Spanish Club had a busy year.

The organization attended a posada at the Edwardsville Methodist Church, the International Dinner, and challenged the French Club in its annual soccer match, all to spread Spanish influence.

To finance its activities, the club sold candy bars and pinatas.

JCL second at state

Led by the tug-of-war team's victory, the BHHS chapter of the Junior Classical League captured second overall at the annual State convention at Wichita Northwest High School.

The BSHS delegation, 16 members, came in behind Sumner Academy, which has over 200 members.

In the "Olympic" portion of the contest, Bonner's two relay teams both place second.

Cultures combine at International Dinner

Where can you eat lasagna, crepes, and tacos all in the same meal? The International Dinner, of course.

Sponsored by French Club, Spanish Club, and the Junior Classical League, the International Dinner is an evening set aside for the three clubs to gather and exchange cultural lessons through the foods of their respective countries.

The bill of fare included relishes and lasagna provided by J.C.L., chicken in wine and pastries from French Club, and tacos and fruit pizzas served by Spanish Club.

Drama Club sees changes

With a new sponsor, Mrs. Bari Foote, the Drama Club made some changes for the better.

Early in the year, the organization adopted a constitution and established a point system for lettering.

To raise money, the club did away with the traditional candy sale and instead sold and delivered carnations from anonymous benefactors. The club had a profitable week of sales as business was "blooming." In addition, the club sold refreshments during intermission of both plays.

The money raised by these sales projects went into a fund to improve the theater.

At the organization’s annual banquet, three new awards were presented: best character actor, best character actress, and most valuable drama student.
Banquet honors actors

In an evening filled with food, fun, honors, and humor, the annual Forensic, Theater, and Debate Banquet was a smash success at the Washington Street Station in Kansas City.

With seniors Richard Gumm and Darryl Corcoran as masters of ceremony, Pat Kelly and Dixie Swegle were named best actor and actress, respectively. Richard Gumm and Ronda Fox received best supporting actor and actress honors, respectively. Also, Darryl Corcoran was named best character actor and Angie Smith best character actress. In addition, Marty Alderman, Kathy Thorn, and Dawn Martens received awards for their technical expertise.

The marching braves . . . many and musical

What do you get when you put together the largest number of students in one classroom during fourth hour? The answer to that could vary depending upon whom you ask. But, if you ask any of the students in band (or Instrumental Music) you would get, "A lot of fun," "An experience".

The Bonner High Band is capable of being a concert band, a marching band, a pep band an animal house. They provide the music for the football games, the pep rallies, parades, basketball games, and anywhere else they are invited. Besides all these events, they give three concerts and participate in the Cavalcade of Bands.

This year, with approval of the Board of Education, the band members are deep into a fund raising campaign for new uniforms. Approximately $16,000 is needed and band members will provide half of that amount through a variety of fundraisers. They have already attack their job with a gusto and are well on their way to success.

After a vote by the band members, Bill Rehm was honored as this year's recipient of the John Phillips Sousa award.

In addition to this award, Rehm was a member of the Kansas Music Educators’ District I Honors Band. At the regional music festival, he received II's as a soloist and as a member of the brass quartet.

ACTIVITIES

The Homecoming and Christmas dances bring students together for an evening of dancing, talking, and mingling. Students can spend the evening surrounded by friends or alone with that special someone.

The school's two plays this year, The Prisoner of Second Avenue and Arsenic and Old Lace, pulled together students with a variety of talents and personalities. Out of this diversity came a team effort which produced two outstanding plays.

Other activities such as open house, debate and forensics also united students to accomplish a mutual goal.

All in all, the activities at B.S.H.S. are an important part of school life. They give students time to realize their likenesses and pool their resources in a team effort.
Rain fails to dampen homecoming spirit

Despite the downpour, the students and alumni of B.S.H.S. let their school spirit shine. The citizens of Bonner turned out in force to cheer the Braves on to victory.

The day kicked off with the parade through town. Led by an Army color guard, the band, cheerleaders, and pom pon squad marched through Bonner as an enthusiastic but soggy crowd watched.

Decorated in crepe-paper-turned-mush, the class floats followed for the annual fierce competition between grades. The panel of judges after much debate chose the junior float as the 1981 winner of the float competition.

The Braves' football team took the crowd's enthusiasm onto the playing field and romped over EKL rival Blue Valley 12-0. Even with a wet field the Braves were able to use their potent running game to down the Tigers.

Crisswell reigns over homecoming

For senior Anne Crisswell, the dream came true when the sparkling tiara was placed on her head declaring that she was BSHS's 1981 Homecoming Queen.

Because of rainy weather during halftime of the football game, coronation ceremonies were delayed until the dance that evening.

With her court surrounding her, Anne proudly ruled over the dance.

With the DJ playing a mixture of rock and country, Lori Crisswell and Tim Prichard danced the night away.

Homecoming goes Western

With Sound Dynamics providing a combination of rock and country music, the night was filled with music and dancing.

Because the coronation ceremonies during the football game were postponed due to the rain, the crowning of Anne Crisswell as queen took place during the dance.

Even with the rain, it was an evening to remember.

"Prisoner" captivates audience with laughs.

With a combination of novice and veteran actors along with a riotous script by Neil Simon, the fall play, "The Prisoner of Second Avenue," was a smash success.

In the lead role was Richard Gumm, playing the part of Mel Edison, a middle-aged man coming apart at the seams. His wife, Edna Edison, also suffering a mid-life crisis, was portrayed by Dixie Swegle.

Other characters included Mel's brother and sisters. Harry, played by Darryl Corcoran, is a childish man constantly seeking attention. His sisters, Pearl (Nicki Barger), Jessie (Amy Reed), and Pauline (Ronda Fox), are less interested than helping their younger brother than Harry.

As the play opens, we see Harry as a man on edge; everything seems to bother him. Despite his wife's consoling comments, he sinks further into depression.

A combination of being fired and having his apartment robbed on the same day are too much for Mel and he suffers a nervous breakdown.

As Edna enters the job market and Mel psycho-therapy, the roles switch. Now Edna is falling apart and Mel is well. By the play's end, both return to their normal states, but not until the audience has laughed its way through two hilarious acts.

Comical highlights include Mel's conversation with the next-door neighbors, the robbery scene, and Mel's two drenchings by the neighbors upstairs.

Behind the scenes, first-year director Mrs. Bari Foote stood by with nervous anticipation. Under her direction, the actors and actresses created believable characters while the crew created BSHS's beautifullest set ever.

The combination of Mrs. Foote, the cast, the crew, and the wonderful set proved to be spectacular, supplying the audience with laugh after laugh while at the same time offering a vital message on how to live in today's society.
Mel (Richard Gumm) and Edna (Dixie Swegle) try to console each other about their overwhelming problems caused by society.

Playing the role of a singing burglar, Alonzo Linan searches for more valuables to carry off to music.

Jessie, Harry, and Pearl argue over how much to lend Mel. Neither of the sisters can understand the value of “X”.

Adamant, Mel forces Edna to listen to the party going on next door. “Don’t sleep with your head against the wall, sleep in the bedroom,” she answers.
With a blanket of sparkling white covering the ground, the students of BSHS celebrated the arrival of the Christmas season. "Midnight Sleigh Ride" served as the dance's theme as the Commons was ornamented with tinsel, holly, and other Yuletide decorations. Kathleen Hornick was crowned as queen of the dance and with her court, Lorre Chrisswell, Annis Tedford, and Sandy Rollins, reigned over the dance.

Debate team small but mighty

Despite having only six members, the B.S.H.S. debate team showed its strength with a winning season. Overall, the squad finished with a 44-32 record.

At the prestigious S.M. East Tournament, Dixie Swegle and Cliff Ferrell broke into quarterfinals.

All in all, it was a successful and fun season for the team.

Senior Richard Gumm finished his debate career with an impressive 49-22 record.

Mrs. Bari Foote, in her first year as debate coach, weathered the storm with ease.

New coach leads young forensics team

With first-year coach Mrs. Bari Foote at the helm, the BSHS forensics team had a fairly successful season and held a unique forensics tournament.

Dubbed the "Bonner and Bailey Forensic Circus," the squad hosted its annual tournament with a carnival theme. Balloons, streamers, contests, food, and good times highlighted the day of competition.

In competition, Pat Kelly and Darryl Corcoran received a "I" rating at the state speech festival while Bonner's other competitors received "Il's."

"Arsenic and Old Lace" kills audience with many laughs

A play with 12 corpses, two murderous old ladies, and a Boris Karloff look-alike sounds like anything but a comedy. But Joseph Kesselring's "Arsenic and Old Lace" is exactly that.

With Mrs. Bari Foote directing, 16 B.S.H.S. students spent seven weeks working, rehearsing, and finally performing this classic comedy to the delight of audiences.

Aunt Martha and Aunt Abby (Dixie Swegle and Ronda Fox) have an unusual habit: murder. Their habit causes Mortimer Brewster (Alonzo Linan) and his fiancee (Emily Thomas) loads of hilarious problems.

The plot thickens when the aunts' nephew Johnathan (Pat Kelly) and his cowardly side-kick Dr. Einstein (Richard Gumm) enter and compete for bodies.

Topped off with a beautiful set filled with antiques, the play was a smash success from start to finish leaving its audience in stitches.

Hurley wins gold medals

For the fourth straight year, a student in the Arts and Crafts department won a Gold Medal on the national level in the Scholastic Art contest. Twen Hurley received this prestigious award for the second time for her silver and cloisonne powder box. Twen’s piece was one of only 450 to be honored with a Gold Medal out of approximately 9,300 entries. Since 1974, Crafts students at BSHS have won ten Gold Medals.

Twen’s powder box will be on display at the Parson School of Design art gallery in New York from June 18-30. It will be considered for the National Scholastic film strip and returned in September.

The box measures 2 1/2” around and 3/4” in height. It features a red, orange and yellow enamel lid, a red leather lining and a small wood powder puff with a repeat of the lid’s design on top.

Cloisonne is the ancient Chinese art in which silver wires are soldered to a base and enamel colors are filled into the cells between the wires.

Twen won her first Gold Medal in 1981 for a Textile Design. She was among the eleven Gold Keys and Honorable mentions received in 1982 at the Regional contest.

With ten Gold Key winners in eight years from her crafts classes, Mrs. Knowles is (and rightly so) a very proud teacher. Her ability to bring out creativity while teaching the crafts’ skills to her students indicates her talent and dedication.

SPORTS

Athletics play a major role at B.S.H.S. for both participant and spectator. Valuable lessons are learned on the field, court, and track.

For the athlete, he receives a opportunity to grow and improve physically. With the help of the coaching staff, a student can become faster, stronger, and bigger than before. Also, the athlete is taught how to take care of and protect his body from serious injury.

But more importantly, the student receives an opportunity to grow and improve psychologically. An athlete learns discipline, cooperation, and dedication. The student realizes the importance of a team effort and learns how to compete in a healthy manner.

But sports are just as vital to students who do not play. Watching the home team battle to victory builds school spirit and encourages students to improve.

In short, athletics are a significant part of high school life. No matter whether the Braves win or lose, something is achieved.
Despite their youth and inexperience, the BSHS cross country team had a successful season.

Seniors John Heeke and Curtis Venerable gave the squad support. Heeke finished his career as the Harriers' number four man. Taking 18th, he was Bonner's top runner at Blue Valley. He also placed 19th in the EKL and 48th at State. Venerable also gave the team a needed boost. Venerable placed 25th at the league race and 19th at the Bonner Invitational.

The big surprise of the season was the running of freshman Tim Ballou. Ballou finished the season as Bonner's top runner taking ninth in the EKL and Regionals and 25th at State. All three places were the best ever for a BSHS freshman.

The #1 doubles team: Steve Hoffine and the captain of the squad, Dale Hammontree, captured second at Leavenworth, fifth at Gardner and seventh at Ottawa.

Playing #1 singles, John Hale placed second at Leavenworth, fourth at Gardner and fifth at Ottawa. Craig Kirchner had a team record: a 12 match winning streak.

Fresh duo Brad Palmberg and Darrin Noah showed promising style.

The golf team, coached by Bob Chatterton, claimed the Sunflower Quadangular title. At Regionals, junior James Freeman, qualified for the State meet by tying for tenth place. As a team, they placed fourth in Regionals.

At Olathe, Bonner golfers were fourteenth out of eighteen teams. Third at the Washburn Rural Quadangular, they also placed fourth at Regionals. At Osawatomie, the Braves two-man team was 12th of 18, while the four-man team placed 11th. The squad finished 11th at the Jefferson County North Invitational with Weir and Freeman placing 9th.
Achievements

The achievements accomplished at B.S.H.S. are brought on by the determination and hard work of teachers, the administration, and students.

Through National Honor Society, the Citizen of the Year award, and the high honors group, the administration and faculty recognizes outstanding seniors.

The student body shows it appreciation by selecting Injun Joe and Jane and the election of class favorites. By doing so, students give their approval to the work of dedicated students.

Mostly because of the work of counselor Mr. Roger Mignot, businesses and organizations outside the school recognize superior students with awards and scholarships.

No matter what the achievement, it is recognized at B.S.H.S. This recognition comes in the form of banquets, ceremonies, scholarships, awards, or sometimes simply a warm handshake. The achievements accomplished at B.S.H.S. should be a source of pride to all students, they typify the dedication which fills the school.

1982 Citizen of the year—Jo Kerby

The most coveted honor of the year is the "Citizen of the Year" title. This honor indicates that you have excelled academically, have shown unusual leadership ability and responsibility, given evidence of a sound value structure that you live by and contributed to the school scene.

Certainly, Jo Kerby has all of these qualifications and more. She was president of Kayettes, a member of National Honor Society and a member of Pom Pon as well as many other activities.

The selection of Jo Kerby as "Citizen of the Year" was no surprise and met with full and enthusiastic approval by both faculty and students.

Being initiated into National Honor Society is an important occasion. We are selected by our teachers and we must select our sponsor, make the pledge and be committed by the ceremony to a constant vigil for excellence.

An impressive ceremony, the support and reinforcement of our sponsor and the Sacred Flame and Pledge help us to realize that our potential is now in our hands and that we are obligated to stretch it, use it, and encourage it in our lives.

National Honor Society is the goal of the top 50% of the class and the final realization is 15%. Scholarship, energy, and willingness are the keys to their success. The amount of time and energy they put into the many activities on the school scene and their achievements while they are involved make them stand out—and finally, be chosen to National Honor Society.

POW WOW gets the news around fast

Pow Wow members had a very busy year in 1981-82. They published 13 issues of the paper with a total of 156 pages. This may not be impressive to some, but it meant nearly a page a day in a 180-day school year.

Students wrote stories, set type on the Compugraphic, proofed the copy, and did the paste-up. A student photographer took all the pictures, developed and printed them. That can keep 15 students busy. The editor insisted that a 28 page final issue could be done and it was.

Braves’ best—Injun Joe and Injun Jane

The Injun Joe and Injun Jane titles are coveted by every senior and the final selection is made after the publications classes narrow the field down to six top contenders. An assembly for the exhibiting of the talents of the top competitors is always a fun experience. And the POW WOW and Totem Pole classes design an assembly which will be remembered . . . by the participants and the audience.

Along with high school comes the realization that teachers are human beings. And nowhere else is the humanity of teachers more evident than at B.S.H.S.

Students come to know faculty members as more than just people who lecture and grade papers. After the initial encounter, students find their teachers to be warm, caring, concerned individuals.

Most teachers go out of their way to make sure students realize that they are available to give help on academic and personal problems. Some students' best friends are often teachers.

Over the years, students have gone to ball games and plays, played Boggle, shopped, and painted with teachers. The faculty of B.S.H.S. is a prime example of how teaching is not just an eight-hour job. They have given their time, resources, and attention to our betterment.
Quietly working, the Board of Education provides us with the best they can for a good education. Rarely do we see them, but their meetings last far into the night as they ponder and seek all available choices for us. Many free hours are given for our benefit. And on graduation day, they are as proud as we are!

These three men have the responsibility of 650 of us and it is often monumental. Between the scheduling, the discipline, the operation of all the parts to make a first-rate school, they must be constantly alert to our needs, our wants and teen-aged whims. We keep them on their toes—and they keep us on ours.

Office Personnel

These five women do all kinds of things for us from taking our temperature to calling us to the office for a message to keeping our records. They are patient when we forget our money, considerate when we are sick, accurate when they keep our records and absolutely vital to our extra-curricular needs. They live through thousands of interruptions an hour and stay sane, quietly getting things done for us... in spite of us.
Counseling and media center

Our Guidance Department helped us make decisions about our future. They not only advised us about which college but they helped us find our aptitudes and our special interests so that we might use them to decide on our futures. They helped us with applications for scholarships and grants and saw to it that we took advantage of every opportunity available.

English classes teach basics and literary appreciation

During the school year, the English department has the difficult task of teaching the basic skills of writing, offering advanced training in composition, and giving students of all levels some degree of appreciation and understanding of literature.

To accomplish this job, it offers such courses as beginning writing, early English Lit., College Comp I and II, sports literature, and other classes.

In short, the English department must meet a wide range of needs for students with varying levels of ability.
Students see changing times

Learning the past is the essential ingredient for making better decisions for the future. Social Sciences teach us the *why*s of the past and, hopefully, the hows of the future.

Right along with the classes has been history-making events. They have provided our teachers with ample examples for illustrating man's role in making history.

Parlez-vous français

In our Spanish and French classes, we not only learn a new language, we learn much more. The customs of other nations, their manners and morals, their lifestyles, foods and festivals, their history and their origins all are studied and, whenever possible, reenacted or tried. At Christmas time, we add another dimension to our own customs by trying theirs. We learn to eat their foods, sing their songs and dance their folk dances. We broaden our own lives.
We learn the business of business

Under the conscientious leadership of our business department teachers, we get a glimpse at the world of offices, secretaries, accountants and typists. They show us the techniques and teach us the skills that will help us to get jobs and understand our own need to keep records. And they emphasize accuracy and show us why accuracy is so important.
"Let's get physical"

Two years of physical education is all that is required but not all that is wanted. We enjoyed those games in the gym and we miss them during our junior and senior years. Fortunately we get to extend physical education by participating in our sports program.

With Mr. Richard Nelson, (left) and Miss Shirley Vaughn (right) to lead us, we explore our world. We learn to find out "why" and "how" and no one answers "just because." The things which seemed to be just mysteries, become important processes that we can understand. Science—that word that means difficult to us—becomes a subject that opens our eyes to understanding our world and ourselves. Asking "why" and finding out "why" becomes an adventure.

Calculation, Evaluation, Exploration Awaken Us

Whether to calculate the area of a rug or the distance to the moon or just the miles per gallon that we get on our cars, we have the expert teaching of Mrs. Muriel Jared (upper right), Mr. William Chambers (lower left) and Mr. Ken Clark. They help us organize and develop our skills so that we can compete and measure ourselves on whatever scales we encounter.
In our Arts and Crafts Department we have the teachers and the materials to launch into a creative project. We discover talents and hone skills and learn to appreciate the work of others as we try to do it ourselves. Color, shape, form become new dimensions to explore.

In our Instrumental and Vocal Music Department we learn the beauty of sound whether it is our voices harmonizing with others or our skill at a musical instrument combining with others to perform a fugue. We learn to understand and appreciate the "sound of music."

Appreciation, Invention and Creation Delight Us

Industrial arts, home ec readies students for world

Outside high school, there is a world filled with dirty dishes, broken cars, crying babies, and haywire deep freezes. The Industrial Arts and Home Economics departments prepare students for that real world of hassles.

In home ec courses, students, both male and female, learn domestic skills and methods of home management. Students are taught to cook, clean, sew, and wash economically.

In advanced classes, students design houses and clothes with economy and innovation in mind. Also, would-be-parents get the experience of handling children in child development.

Despite being forced out of its normal quarters, the Industrial Arts department continued with the task of training students to live in a mechanical society, and handle all the problems that come with technology.

To prepare students, courses taught them how to draft, wire, repair cars, operate power tools, and generally understand our automated society.

All in all, the Industrial Arts and Home Ec departments serve as a transition between high school and the real world. By taking these practical classes, students learn to cope with life's common problems.

Keeping the home ec department’s books, Mrs. Sharilyn Honacki must be both a teacher and a manager.

The peanut-butter pizza people

It takes a lot of courage to try to cook for and please a student body of over 600. But our cooks try to do that and there are certain specialties that we really gobble up. Their pizza, taco salad, ham and cheese roll-ups and lasagna made our mouths water while they prepared them and we wanted the biggest serving when we went through the line. They are tucked in our memories.

One of the most familiar sights in the area is the big school bus coming over the hill. Over 1500 of us in USD #204 depend upon these mobile monsters to get to school. The driver becomes our friend as we sleepily board his bus in the mornings.

Of course, once we get our drivers license, we jump at every opportunity to use the family car to drive to school. But, memories of riding that old school bus are indelibly stamped on our minds. Their reliability was an example for us to emulate.
CLASSES

Class of ’82 . . . Class of ’83 . . . Class of ’84 . . . the numbers change, but that is all that changes. Through four years of high school, each class has many of the same experiences.

During the freshman year, students suffer from confusing scheduling, baffling halls, and intimidating students and teachers. The adjustment to high school is not easy, and almost takes a year to accomplish.

In many ways, the sophomore year is worse. The word sophomore is Greek for “wise fool,” and perfectly describes sophomores’ problems. They have adjusted to high school, but still have two years before their senior year, two years of growing and learning.

The excitement of being a senior starts during the junior year. Juniors slowly begin to gain confidence as they step into positions of leadership. By the end of the year, the juniors are ready to move into the senior limelight.

Then, finally it comes, the senior year. Seniors become the center of attention as they prepare to leave for the real world. As the days begin to dwindle in mid-April, friends and school become more important; the senior knows they will soon part.

These four individual years combine to form high school. The amazing part is that the experiences of each year is taking place in the same building at the same time, and no one escapes the building without having encountered them.
Freshmen learn the ways of high school

Each fall as freshmen enter BSHS for the first time, they all feel almost the same emotions: excitement, fear, curiosity, and the desire to succeed.

Each spring as the freshmen leave BSHS for summer vacation, they once more have the same feelings: confidence, pride, and the knowledge that they have survived their first year of high school.

Phrases like, “Where is 19F?”, “I can’t open my locker!”, and “What’s a pep assembly like?” are constantly said by freshmen.

In sports, both the freshman football and basketball teams had outstanding records. Tim Ballou led the cross country team.

Cheryl Tinder concentrates on her assignment in English. Later in the year, she will go to reading lab, a new experience.

Freshmen discover the library is a place to work, study, read, and relax. During the year freshmen realize its importance.

Without question, the sophomore year is the hardest. The excitement and newness of being a freshman is gone, and the thrill of graduation is still two long years away. It's very easy to just sit back and let the sophomore year pass away without accomplishing much. But many dedicated sophomores spent their second year in high school bettering themselves and the school.

In sports, several sophomores led the way on the court or field. Hughes Suffren received several post-season awards while leading the basketball team in scoring and rebounding. James Shevling grappled to second in state in addition to winning the E.K.L. and regional wrestling titles.

Angie Smith showed her leadership by becoming only the second sophomore elected as STUCO vice-president. Anita Daly also her ability to lead after being chosen F.H.A. district vice-president.

It crosses their mind once in a while early in the year, but by spring it's all the juniors think about: I'm almost a senior!

The class of 1983 watched the class of 1982 anxiously, waiting for the moment it to be their turn. But the juniors did more than just watch, they participated.

In sports, Grady Newton stood out in football, basketball, and track. Dan Burnam, Jeff Hernandez, Johnetta Kimbrough, Shelley Carson, and Tracy Tallman also contributed heavily to the school’s athletic program.

Long-awaited senior year for Class of '82

Without question, the senior year is the most awaited for. It is a combination of the waiting, the power, the prestige, and the responsibility that keeps students counting the days until their senior year.

The situation was no different for the Class of 1982, which anxiously awaited its turn to be top of the totem pole. But once the moment came, seniors wasted no time in accomplishing amazing fetes.

Seniors took over the positions on responsibility and leadership with ease, showing the underclassmen the way. The accomplishments of the Class of '82 fill this yearbook and the memories of students, teachers, friends, and parents. The Class of '82 was a class to be remembered and respected.
After four years of high school, it is impossible to come out without at least one embarrassing situation. The annual Senior Dinner takes advantage of these embarrassing moments to entertain students and faculty alike.

With Richard Gumm and Tom Beebe as masters of ceremony, a variety of setup were used to poke fun at seniors.

As a robot fortune teller, Regina Stillman dug out amusing stories on seniors and turned them into humorous predictions.

Later, Jo Kerby and Kristi Foster portrayed placement agency representatives and Bill Rehm and Erin Shevling as talent scouts, all to bring out more funny stories about the Class of '82.

The evening included the presenting of “care packages,” a performance by Regina and the Drips, and surprises for Miss Sheley and Mrs. Wood.

It was all in all an evening of food, fun, mirth, and memories.

Doug Eagle stands and takes his good-natured ribbing for his unusual decorations for the band room.

Wearing Mr. Craven's jacket, Jeff Shuster's trips to the Old Chelsea and his other misadventures come back to haunt him. But Jeff takes it all with a happy grin.

As a robot fortune teller, Regina Stillman predicts the future of some B.S.H.S. seniors based on their unusual past.
Coal miners and gangs invade senior assembly

Take some coal miners, two angry gangs, an Artesian, and some spirited runners and what have you got? A senior pep assembly, of course.

First, it was revealed that Bonner Springs was the future hub of the coal industry. The senior girls prepared for their jobs "working in a coal mine."

With the coal came musical gangs, who went all out fighting to music from "West Side Story."

In another revelation, BSHS's super-snoop Richard Gumm announced that Bonner's own Chris Surritte was really an Artesian in disguise.

The assembly closed with some spirited races and pyramid-building contests along with a shouting match between the guys and the gals.
Anne Crisswell practices for her future career as a coal miner as she shovels to the beat.

The excitement and cheer of the assembly carries out into the Commons as the seniors keep partying.

"This One's For You"... The Senior Prom

Dancing for fun and memories, the prom brings the end of the year and the end of high school for seniors.

Polly Phillips and her date talk casually as they listen to the music of "Live Wire."

"Live Wire" gives the seniors and their a farewell night.
An evening of formals, flowers and friends

Mark Fix and Debbie Wilcox are all dressed up to go “dreaming” and partying. Phil Brown, former BSHS student, and the leader of “Live Wire” entertains us. David Tavis and his date ignore the spilled drink. Seniors and their dates make small talk as they enjoy each others company and the party scene.

Baccalaureate offers challenge to graduates

To honor graduating seniors in God's presence, Baccalaureate services are held. After the scripture reading and the choir, a challenge was made by the minister: to become the best at whatever you want to be. It was a message seniors will remember and reflect upon for many years.

Graduation—An exciting metamorphosis

It seems from the day we enter school, we anticipate graduation day. It is the first big step in our lives and we can hardly wait for it. We didn’t realize how fast it would be here and how our feelings would suddenly change. We found ourselves a little reluctant.

What we thought we disliked became more dear to us. The friends we had made, the teachers we respected, the building and halls that were familiar and fun-filled, all became a part of memories that we weren’t sure we wanted to leave behind. A few misgivings cropped up in us.

But we gained courage from each other and stood proud and tall in our caps and gowns. The speeches challenged us and we embraced the challenges to go out and do our part to make a better world. But wherever we go and whatever we do, a little of our heart will remain in Braveland.

Colophon

Five-hundred copies of the 196-page 1981-82 Totem Pole were printed by Inter-Collegiate Press in Shawnee Mission, Ks. All type was set in 8, 10, and 30 point Malibu. The book was printed on 80 pound gloss enamel paper and sewn with Smythe stone binding. A special thanks to Don Consolver, our company representative, the Bonner Springs Chief, and Angie Wind, our unique advisor.
This book ends the same way it began: with a picture of the school. But the sharp colors of the first page have faded to a dull black and white. Much in the same way, the sharp colors of our memories will fade to black and white. Throughout the book, pictures are cut into sections, as in the above picture. Likewise, our memories will slowly break into bits and pieces. When the colors become too dim and the fragments too small, turn to the pages of this book.

Hopefully, by looking through the book, the subtle shadings of your memory will be repainted. But you will decide which colors will tint your reminiscences. The happy times will undoubtedly be bright oranges, yellows, and greens. The sad and angry times will be dark reds, grays, and blues. But as time passes, you will change the colors you use to shade your memories as sad times switch to good times, and visa versa. Eventually, you will use only one color to varnish over all your high school recollections.

Also, use the book to cement your memories back together when they become too confusing and disjoint. But even the strongest mortar erodes and must be reapplied occasionally. Still, just as the edges of the sectioned pictures will wear down, so will edges of your memories. They cannot be replaced. Some memories you may even want to fall away.

Therefore, think of this book as the paint and mortar of your past. Apply it sparingly; it must last a lifetime. But whenever a friend's face is dim or the recollection of an important event is shattered, open this book.
